Center matches $1 million challenge grant

Bowling Green State University's Social Philosophy and Policy Center has successfully matched a $1 million challenge grant from the Stranahan Foundation of Toledo, Dwight Burlingame, vice president for University relations, has announced.

More than $1,030,000 in grants and pledges has been raised in less than nine months by Jeffrey Paul, associate director of the center, who coordinates fund-raising efforts; Fred D. Miller Jr., from the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation; the John M. Olin Foundation; the J.M. Foundation; the Sarah Scaife Foundation; the Scaife Family Foundation and the Master Chemical Corporation in Perrysburg.

The $1 million grant from the Stranahan Foundation, which was contingent upon the center securing an equal amount from other sources, will be combined with the matching funds to create an endowment that will significantly expand the Social Philosophy and Policy Center's visiting scholars, publications and conference programs.

"One of the most important uses of the funds will be for the center's distinguished research fellows and visiting scholars program," Dr. Paul said. "We already have two leading scholars in residence every year: John Gray of Jesus College at the University of Oxford and A.G.N. Flew

Governor Richard Celeste kept his promise to the Falcon football team by being on hand in Bowling Green Oct. 4 to cheer them to victory against Western Michigan. During a send-off to the California Bowl last year, Celeste promised he would attend a Bowling Green game this season. While at the University, the governor attended a tailgate party sponsored by the Young Democrats, and later met with Bowling Green staff in the president's box. Here he talks with (from left) Mike McIntyre, editor of The BG News; Dwight Burlingame, vice president of University relations; and Phil Mason, executive assistant to the president.

New Music Festival features works of 30 composers

The Bowling Green State University College of Musical Arts will hold its seventh annual New Music Festival featuring music by 30 U.S., Canadian and European composers Thursday through Saturday (Oct. 16-18).

Writing in "Perspectives of New Music," Robert Hall Lewis described the 1985 Bowling Green New Music Festival as "demonstrating a standard which various other musical communities could well afford to emulate."

This year's festival showcases special guests John Cage, one of the most influential American composers of this century, and performance artist Pat Oleszko, who delights in creating unpredictable, but memorable moments of humor.

A new feature of this year's festival is that, although most events will be held at the Moore Musical Arts Center, two Saturday afternoon events will be held at the Toledo Museum of Art.

In addition to performances by faculty and students of the University's College of Musical Arts, the Percussion Group/Cincinnati returns to play Cage's "Music for Three" at a Friday evening concert where Cage will perform his 1983 work, "Mushrooms at variations."

Guest artists also include the duo of trombonist Miles Anderson and violinist Erica Sharp, and saxophonist David Pituch.

Anderson has had a varied career performing in night clubs, orchestras, the recording industry, Broadway shows and as a founding member of the Los Angeles Brass Quintet. Sharp, Anderson's wife, was a member of the San Francisco Symphony for 20 years, played in the San Francisco Opera Orchestra for 10 years and is a former member of the Bloch Quartet.

Pituch, a 1969 graduate of the Baldwin-Wallace College Conservatory, recorded classical music for Polskie Nagrania Muza (The Polish Recording Company) and Pro Viva in Munich, West Germany. A frequent guest soloist at contemporary music festivals, he has represented new saxophone music at events in Warsaw, West Berlin, Lisbon and Salzburg.

The festival gets underway at 11:45 a.m. Thursday with a question-and-answer session with John Cage. The session, sponsored by the activities committee of the department of philosophy will be held from 11:45 a.m.-1 p.m. in the Green Room of the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Anderson will give a trombone lecture-demonstration at 3 p.m. in 1012 Moore Musical Arts Center. Sharp will lead a workshop on "How to Get an Orchestra Job — And Keep It" at the same time in Room 2002.

Anderson, Sharp and Pituch will appear in the festival's opening concert at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in Bryan Recital Hall, and Oleszko will present a multimedia extravaganza entitled "War 'N Piece: Where Fools Russian" at 9 p.m. that evening in Kobacker Hall.

Oleszko, a 1970 University of Michigan graduate, is known for what she calls "pedestrian sculpture." She has toured throughout the United States and Canada doing her humorous monologues wearing her "sculpture" costumes, and has appeared in Europe and Japan.

Concerts are scheduled at 10:30 a.m., 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Friday. Pituch will give a saxophone workshop at 9 a.m. in 2002 Moore Musical Arts Center; Distinguished Visiting Psychology Professor Manfred Clynes will give a lecture on "Cracking the Code of Musicality" at 9 a.m. in Room 2008; and a panel on "Radio and the Living Composer" will be presented at 4 p.m. that day in Bryan Recital Hall.

Saturday events begin with a 9:30 a.m. concert in Bowling Green. The festival then moves to the Toledo Museum of Art. A "dialogue" moderated by Robert Croan of the "Pittsburgh Gazette" with Cage and Oleszko begins at 1:30 p.m. in the museum's Little Theater. A 3 p.m. concert will follow in the Museum's Great Gallery.

The final event is an 8 p.m. Saturday concert featuring the Bowling Green Philharmonia performing Cage's "Dance/4 Orchestras." The work involves four orchestras, placed around the hall with four conductors.

Guest composers from the University include Burton Beerman, College of Musical Arts, whose work "Night Calls" will be performed at 9:30 a.m., Saturday in Bryan Hall; Wallace DePue, College of Musical Arts, whose work "Separation" will be performed at 2:30 p.m. Friday in Kobacker Hall; Patrick Kelly, student, whose work "Vivant la Mort" will be performed at 10:30 a.m. Friday in Bryan Hall; and Donald M. Wilson, College of Musical Arts, whose work "Diagon" will be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday in Kobacker Hall.

Other faculty and student performers will be featured in various ensembles.

Lamont Greene

Lamont Greene to receive Service Award

Lamont "Monty" Greene, a 1953 Bowling Green State University graduate now living in Atlanta, is the 1986 recipient of the University's Alumni Service Award.

The award, which is given annually to a Bowling Green alumnus who has demonstrated continued and outstanding support to the Alumni Association and the University, was presented during halftime activities of the University's Homecoming game with Eastern Michigan University Saturday (Oct. 11) at Doyt L. Perry Field.

Henry Jacques, president of the Alumni Board of Trustees, presented the award to Greene, who recently retired as senior vice president of the J. Walter Thompson advertising firm and is now president of his own consulting firm, Lamont R. Greene Associates, Inc. He is the 24th recipient of the award.

Green has been active in alumni activities since he was elected to the Alumni Association Board of Trustees in 1978. He served as president in 1979 and 1981.

He has also been active within the College of Business Administration, participating in the annual Executive-in-Residence Program, where he has lectured to dozens of classes. He has also served on the college's Alumni Advisory Council.

In addition, he is a member of the University President's Club.

As an undergraduate, Greene was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity and was president of Interfraternity Council, the governing body for fraternities on the campus. During his senior year, he received the President's Award as "Outstanding Senior Greek."

He also served as vice president of the junior class and was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa national leadership honor society and was general manager of the campus radio station.

Chair of Administrative Staff Council resigns

Citing an increasingly busy schedule in her position in the financial aid office, Deb Heineman resigned as chair of the Administrative Staff Council at its Oct. 1 meeting.

The seat automatically goes to the chair-elect, Suzanne Crawford, continuing education. However, Crawford said her schedule this year does not permit her to assume the duties of the chair position.

The council's by-laws direct that the next person eligible for the position is whoever had the second highest number of votes in the last chair-elect election. Paul Yon, archival collections, who was also on the ballot with Crawford last spring and had the second highest vote count, agreed to chair the council for the remainder of the term.

A special election among administrative staff will be held for the position of chair-elect, as a technicality in the by-laws does not permit Crawford automatically to stay in the seat if she cannot become chair. However, council members passed a motion to place Crawford's name on the ballot for the chair-elect vote.

While no other names were submitted for the ballot, write-in candidates will be accepted as long as they are members of the Administrative Staff Council.

Following Heineman's resignation, several members of the council expressed concern that there is no release time for the chair of Book provides important literature guide

Frances Povsic, Curriculum Resource Center, has spent many evenings curled up with a good book — in fact, she has spent about the past two years poring through hundreds of good books.

The result is Eastern Europe in Children's Literature: An Annotated Bibliography of English-Language Books, describing over 300 twentieth century works suited for elementary and secondary school students.

It is the first bibliography to describe English-language literature reflecting the lives and culture of East Europeans and East European immigrants to the United States. Albanian, Bulgarian, Czechoslovakian, Hungarian, Polish, Romanian and Yugoslavian traditions are featured in the selections of traditional, historical and modern fiction.

Original and traditional stories; collections of folk and fairy tales; collections of ballads, myths, legends, and proverbs; and collections of poetry are among the works listed. In other works, the lives of individuals and historical events up to the immediate post-World War II periods are portrayed. A number of such volumes deal with World War II in general and the Holocaust in particular. Examples of modern fantasy and science fiction are also treated.

"There has never been a guide like this available before," Povsic said. "Hopefully it will be used by social studies and history teachers to guide them in what to use as reading material for their students."

"Good stories, such as these, help children experience other people's lives through reading."

The book was prompted by several articles Povsic wrote earlier listing brief bibliographies of some of these works. She received many requests for further listings and was later approached by Greenwood Press Inc. to write a more complete bibliography.

In preparing her listings, Povsic said she had intended to include children's literature from Russia but eventually realized it was too extensive for just one volume. She is now working on a companion bibliography covering the entire Soviet Union.

Bibliography entries are listed alphabetically, and include the names of authors as well as illustrators. All listings have been published in English, and most are currently available for purchase. Annotations, evaluative comments, and discussions of reading and use levels will help the user decide titles for his or her needs.

Povsic took a sabbatical from her University duties in order to complete work on the book. The work was particularly time consuming because all research had to be done manually, and she had to read all the material herself in order to evaluate it.

She studied various guides and national bibliographies, and visited numerous libraries to do her research. "It was a tremendous job, and a tedious one. But I learned a lot, too," Povsic said.

Option examined by Undergraduate Council

Credit for portfolios would be given for outcomes of work experiences.

These outcomes, as evidenced through the portfolio, would be evaluated by faculty members to determine if they equate to the outcomes expected from a given course or courses. Therefore, it would be necessary for faculty members to be able to define what the expected outcomes are for their courses.

If adopted at Bowling Green, it would be understood that not all courses are appropriate for portfolio assessment, and it would be at the discretion of the departments and the colleges to offer the option. If offered, there would be a list developed of courses to offer the option.

A vote will be taken on the proposal at the council's Wednesday (Oct. 15) meeting.

At that same meeting, members of the council will vote on whether the CLEP general examinations should be discontinued in all colleges. Major criticisms have been found with the general examinations, which have not been reviewed by their publisher, the College Board, in 16 years. The Arts and Sciences Council has voted to recommend discontinuation of the general CLEP.

The subject CLEP examinations, which remain rigorous, will still be used at Bowling Green.

In other business, a council committee, commissioned by President Olscamp, has been examining a recommendation that the University introduce a course in Cultural Diversity in the American Experience. Committee chair Ernest Champion introduced the proposal that a fifth category be added to the general education requirements to include cultural diversity.

Council members will continue discussing the proposal in upcoming meetings.

In following the agenda, there was continued discussion of the revisions to procedures for main campus approval of 300 and 400 level courses that are to be taught at Firelands.

At their Sept. 17 meeting, William McGraw, dean of Firelands reported the number of 300 and 400 level courses offered at Firelands would never exceed 20 percent of its total yearly offerings. He clarified that the 20 percent figure represents 20 percent of courses, not sections. Independent studies courses would be included, but instances of such courses are very rare.

Although the new procedure emphasizes the role of the deans' offices, the departments would continue to be closely involved in decisions on the courses to be offered. It is assumed that in multi-section courses which use a common textbook, the Firelands faculty would use the same textbook as the main campus faculty.

In courses that leave the text selection to the discretion of the faculty member, the Firelands faculty members would choose the textbook. It was acknowledged that the textbook could be a point of discussion as 300 and 400 level courses are reviewed and approved for Firelands.

The proposal revisions were approved as presented.

Members of the Undergraduate Council will meet Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. in the McFall Assembly Room. On the agenda is action on the Prior Learning Assessment and the CLEP general examinations; curricular changes in the environmental health program; and more discussion of the cultural diversity recommendation.

Administrative Staff Council from his or her regular University duties.

Ballots for chair-elect will be mailed this month to all administrative staff.

Members also heard a report on the results of a survey conducted earlier this fall on University employees' perceptions of job merit and evaluation. Ninety-nine percent of the 138 people who responded to the survey defined merit as doing the job "well and above" its description. The results of the survey were forwarded to the council's Personnel Welfare Committee where they will be further examined.

Heineman reported that a letter has been sent requesting Administrative Staff Council representation on the Faculty Senate Budget Committee.

Symposium to interpret banking industry

Area banking and savings and loan officers will have the opportunity to hear directly from those who are interpreting and implementing deregulation policies for the banking industry during a one-day symposium at the University Friday (Oct. 17).

Stephen Skomp, finance and insurance department, said the symposium, will feature a keynote address by nationally-known economist Paul Nadler, and is the first of its kind ever offered by Bowling Green.

"Since deregulation became a part of the banking industry several years ago, there has been a great deal of uncertainty as to exactly the kinds of services banks and savings and loans can offer, and of what the reaction of federal and state regulators will be to any expansion of their services," Dr. Skomp said.

He said the symposium may be particularly useful to small and medium banks and savings and loans because they do not have the day-to-day contact with the regulators as do the larger financial institutions.

A panel, which will discuss "Government Supervision of the Evolving Financial Services Industry During Deregulation," is comprised of Connie Harris, Ohio's superintendent of Savings and Loan Associations; Fred Struble, associate director of Banking Supervision and Regulation for the Federal Reserve Board; James Kielczewski, acting regional director (Chicago) for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; Karren Wilson, deputy comptroller of bank supervision for the Chicago office of Comptroller of the Currency; and Linda K. Page, Ohio's superintendent of banks.

Nadler, a professor of finance at the Graduate School of Management at Rutgers University, will moderate the panel, which will be held from 9:30-11:30 a.m. He will also be the keynote speaker at the luncheon following the morning session.

All sessions of the Financial Services Symposium will be in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the University Union.

Grant received

A $16,800 grant to the public administration program from the U.S. Department of Education is being used to provide fellowships for minority graduate students interested in public administration.

D.S. Chauhan, political science, said the federal grant will provide two fellowships at an annual stipend of $8,400 each.

Chauhan said only those public administration programs meeting strict national standards were eligible for the grants and that Bowling Green is one of 60 schools receiving funding under the Public Service Fellowship Program.

Bowling Green's program has received high ratings for its ability to attract minorities, to provide practical experience and for the success of its graduates.

Yom Kippur observed

Faculty are reminded by the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs that a Jewish holiday occurs this month. Yom Kippur will be observed today, Oct. 13.

Faculty are encouraged to grant excused absences for students who request them for observation of Yom Kippur. All students excused from class, however, must make up any work missed as a result of the absence.

Mary Edmonds presents program in Brazil

Mary Edmonds has never been hesitant to spread her wings. Accepting challenges that take her into new directions seem to be her forte, and tantalize her all the more to heighten her goals.

Dr. Edmonds, vice president of student affairs, has taken flight once more, this time in the direction of Brazil, as she participates in the National Conference for Brazilian Physical Therapists and Occupational Therapists in Recife. The program is sponsored by Partners of the Americas, a non-profit organization that links citizens of 43 U.S. states with those of 27 Latin American and Caribbean countries.

The goal of the partnerships is to mobilize resources at the community level for technical and cultural projects, based on the principles of self-help and mutual benefit of both sides of the partnerships.

Dr. Edmonds has actually joined the delegation from Georgia going to Pernambuco, Brazil because the Ohio group does not have an exchange program in physical therapy and rehabilitation. As the only representative from Ohio, she joins five other therapists from Connecticut, Rhode Island and Georgia. They will give presentations and continuing education courses at the national conference and will spend several days in surrounding cities lecturing and advising.

The therapists left for Brazil Oct. 7 and return Oct. 20.

Dr. Edmonds practiced as a physical therapist for 20 years before returning to school for her Ph.D. in sociology with specialization in medical sociology and social gerontology. Mixing sociology and physical therapy seemed like a natural combination to her, she said, and allowed her a better understanding of health and illness behavior.

And now, even though she is an administrator of student services, she said not a day goes by when she doesn't miss being an active physical therapist.

She will again get a chance to combine her career background knowledge in Brazil when she delivers speeches on health care delivery for the elderly at the conference in Recife, and then later meets with officials of Federal University in the same city to discuss student services. She will be consulting on curriculum evaluations and accreditation procedures.

Dr. Edmonds has acquired a large quantity of journals and publications on the specialty of gerontologic physical therapy for distribution at the national conference, which more than 2,000 therapists from all over Brazil have registered to attend.

She has also taken along plenty of Bowling Green State University literature for Brazilian students who might be interested in doing graduate work at the University.

"The United States is the most sophisticated country in the area of physical therapy studies," Dr. Edmonds said. "I think there is a lot we can share with other nations and their students."

"But I'm sure there is a lot we will be learning, too. They might be delivering student services better than we are, I don't know. I'm always open to ideas."

Breaking off from the rest of the delegation, Dr. Edmonds will travel from Recife to Parana, Brazil to make several speeches on the topic of physical therapy.

Although many Brazilians can speak English, interpreters are traveling with the delegation to help translate when needed.

While the Brazilian conference should prove to be interesting and educational, Dr. Edmonds didn't have much of a chance to get excited about it. The trip was confirmed only a week before her departure date.

Originally she was scheduled to attend the conference, and then plans were cancelled. When it was realized her speeches made up one-third of the American program contribution, protocols were re-worked so she could participate.

Reasons vary for donating to United Way campaign

University employees are the key element to the 1986 United Way campaign on campus.

Through a network of volunteers from all areas of the campus community — faculty, administrative and classified staff and students — the campaign this year will attempt to extend a face-to-face invitation to all employees to contribute to United Way.

In the end, however, it is each contributor who determines how successful this year's campaign will be. Last year, employees contributed a record amount of dollars to help the United Way meet its needs. And they did so for a variety of reasons.

"I guess my main reason for giving is that the United Way does a good job," Carl Lipp Jr., financial accounting, said. "I like the idea that I can make one contribution to one group."

Hockey Coach Jerry York agrees. "My wife and I feel that (the United Way) touches on many of the charitable agencies that we would like to help," he said.

The money raised in the campaign supports more than 70 community agencies serving the Bowling Green area.

"I feel it's the only organization I donate to because it does use every penny I donate," Faye Paulsen, assistant vice president of student affairs, said. "I like the things the United Way supports and I know every penny goes to the cause."

In fact, 90 cents of every dollar is returned to the community to help agencies help people.

"It's part of our community," Peg Schaller, psychology department, said. "There are always people in need of help. I hope others feel the same way."

The campus campaign's chair, Terry Parsons, Student Recreation Center, said a 10 percent increase in the number and amount of contributions are two goals of the campus campaign. The increase is required to keep the same level of services as last year.

"I feel I've been pretty lucky and of the University of Reading.

"These new grants will permit us to bring Bowling Green an outstanding international cast of scholars from England, Canada and Australia, as well as the United States."

The grants also will make possible the enhancement of the center's already esteemed publications program, edited by Ellen Frankel Paul, deputy director of the Social Philosophy and Policy Center. The center's journal, "Social Philosophy and Policy," has included highly praised issues on distributive justice, human rights, ethics and economics, and nuclear rights/nuclear wrongs.

President Olscamp said the center is already internationally recognized as a leader in the area of social have not needed to take advantage of the United Way services," Lee Meserve, biological sciences, said.

"Both my wife and I work and we don't have any kids so we do have some spare dollars to give."

And giving is easier than ever. For the first time, strict procedures will be followed to insure confidentiality for donors. Employees also will be encouraged to use a payroll deduction plan as a means of making their donation easier.

The campus campaign, using the theme "Listen to Your Heart and Give Because You Care," begins today (Oct. 13) and runs through Oct. 24.

thought and that the grants will help attract highly qualified students and faculty to both the philosophy department and the University as a whole.

The Social Philosophy and Policy Center, formed in 1981, is an interdisciplinary research group that stimulates thinking and study on issues in which ethical and philosophical considerations play a role in the determination of public policy.

Since its founding, it has received nearly $3.7 million in grants and contracts. During the past year alone, nearly $2.4 million was secured, including grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Exxon Education Foundation.

Two procedures for testing hypothesized causal relations among a set of variables will be discussed and illustrated with examples. The program, sponsored by the Northwest Ohio Chapter of the American Statistical Association, is open to all interested persons.

Chinese exchange seeks participants

The Bowling Green State University/Xi'an Exchange Program is currently soliciting names of faculty interested in teaching at the Xi'an Foreign Languages Institute, Xi'an, Shaanxi Province, China, for the 1987/88 academic year.

The terms of agreement between the two institutes call for an exchange of two or three faculty each year. Bowling Green pays travel costs for the Chinese teachers of English and funds them as graduate assistants during their stay at the University.

The Xi'an Institute, in return, pays travel costs of each Bowling Green faculty member, and for the travel costs of an accompanying spouse. The faculty member is paid the agreed-upon monthly rate by the Institute for 12 months, plus one month's vacation equivalency. The academic year usually covers two semesters beginning about Sept. 1 and ending about July 1, with about a one-month vacation between semesters.

The Xi'an Institute officials have indicated interest in disciplines in addition to English. These include such fields of study as American studies, American/popular culture, history of the United States, comparative education, human geography, educational psychology, library science and instructional media.

Candidates for the exchange are screened by both institutes. For more information, interested faculty should contact Wallace L. Pretzer, English, at 372-8133 (office) or 372-2576 (English department).

Program to integrate two studies

Two University professors have been chosen to join 29 others from throughout the country in starting a "national dialogue" to integrate professional and liberal studies.

James H. Bissland, journalism, and Thomas D. Klein, English, will join educators from 15 other universities in the federally funded project based at the University of Michigan.

"One of the biggest issues in higher education today is what some fear is the turning of colleges into vocational schools at the expense of traditional liberal disciplines such as English, philosophy and the social sciences," Dr. Bissland said.

The educators will work to find ways of promoting liberal learning within professional programs so that graduates are well-rounded instead of being narrowly specialized, he added.

Dr. Bissland and Dr. Klein and two professors from the University of Kentucky are the only representatives of journalism in the project, entitled "Seven Liberal Outcomes of Professional Study."

Other undergraduate disciplines represented in the national project include architecture, business administration, teacher education, engineering, nursing, pharmacy and social work.

Adjust insurance

The month of October is the annual "open period" for full-time employees to apply for new enrollment or make changes in their present hospitalization and major medical programs.

All full-time employees who are not enrolled as subscribers for hospitalization and/or major medical coverage may make application during this month, and those employees presently enrolled under a single contract may change to family during October. All changes and new applications become effective Dec. 1.

Employees who desire new applications or changes in their coverage, or have any questions concerning coverage should contact Diana Shamp, Room 10-B, Shatzel Hall, at 2-2115.

Journalism studied

The entire University journalism faculty will participate in a day-long journalism workshop Wednesday (Oct. 15).

More than 1,500 students and teachers from throughout Ohio, Indiana and Michigan are expected to attend the 34th Annual Fall Journalism Workshop for High School Publication Staffs, according to Linda Glomski, Great Lakes Interscholastic Press Association coordinator. Last year's workshop was the nation's largest.

The workshop is being sponsored by the University's School of Mass Communication and GLIPA.

Manuscripts needed

The Firelands Writing Center of Firelands College is issuing a call for manuscripts for its spring issue of The Plough: North Coast Review.

The regional magazine seeks fiction, poetry, personal essays, as well as photos and drawings. The theme of the spring issue is "Ohio Folklore: The Traditional Beliefs, Customs, and Legends of Ohio." Managing editor is Larry Smith, student affairs.

Fiction manuscripts (up to 6,000 words), poetry (up to five poems on any subject and in any style), personal essays (especially on Ohio folklore) and black and white photos or drawings should be sent to The Plough: North Coast Review, Firelands College, 901 Rye Beach Road, Huron, Oh., 44839. Deadline is Feb. 1, 1987.
